

InScience, International Science Film Festival Nijmegen is one of the largest international film festivals for science films in Europe. The program consists of the best science films that have been released worldwide in the past year. During the festival, top international scientists, filmmakers and audiences meet to share the latest insights that shape the world of tomorrow.

For the new edition of InScience (March 14-17, 2024) we are looking for an intern who wants to support the Marketing & Communications department. As a marketing & communications intern, you assist the coordinator of your department. You focus on writing PR texts and approach the press and media, you create content for the website and for social media, think about an online marketing strategy and take care of news distribution via social media. Together with the coordinator, you think about activation projects and campaigns and help with their implementation. You also provide support for sales activities and coordinate audience research.

At InScience, interns are at the heart of the organization. You work in a small team, learn from within how a film festival is organized and meet people from across the field.

We are looking for someone with an affinity for culture and festivals, where a special affinity for film and/or science is an advantage. Experience with the Adobe package is also an advantage.

Experience in communication, culture or event organization is nice, but not strictly required. In fact, if you come from a completely different education/background, we encourage you to apply. We do ask for an education at a minimum HBO level. An affinity with writing for various target groups is important.

Work activities

- / Writing promotional texts and creating content for website and social media
- / Approaching the press and media
- / Think about the (online) marketing strategy, activation projects and campaigns, and help with the implementation
- / Coordinate audience survey
- / Support with sales activities

The exact activities depend on your interests, skills and learning goals. We would be happy to discuss this with you.

Practical details

- / You work at least three, maximum four days a week; You can specify the exact days yourself. During the festival period (March 14-17, 2024) you will work every day
- / Internship allowance of €200 per month
- / The internship period runs from November 1, 2023 to June 1, 2024. Other periods are also possible, we are happy to discuss this with you.

What we expect of you

- / You are studying / have just graduated from a communication/marketing/media related HBO or WO education
- / You have an excellent command of the Dutch and English language (both oral and written)
- / You have experience with Photoshop and InDesign (not a requirement, but an advantage)
- / You know how to convert a message or news fact into a catchy, informative text that suits the right target group
- / You are good at using social media (Facebook, Twitter, Instagram)
- / You work in a structured, precise manner and can keep an overview
- / You are independent and can also work well in a team
- / Living in the Nijmegen area is an advantage

If this position appeals to you and you would like to work in a varied position at a film festival, please email your motivation with CV to Andy Leenen via andy@insciencefestival.nl.
